LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 16, 1916.

HON. REED SMOOT,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR SMOOT: It is generally agreed by both Republicans and Democrats that the only practical basis for the determination of the effect of tariff legislation enacted by the Democratic Party in 1913 is the changes brought about during the period that law was in effect prior to the outbreak of the war in Europe, as compared with a corresponding period under Republican tariff laws. For the purpose, apparently, of securing data of this kind the Senate recently adopted a resolution asking the Secretary of Commerce to furnish information regarding imports, exports, and import duties, with a special statement for the period from the enactment of the existing tariff act to the outbreak of the European war, compared with a corresponding period of the previous law. It was generally expected that the data furnished would completely cover the need as stated in the Senate's request, but the copy of the document (S. Doc. No. 366) which we have just received seems to be lacking in several particulars.

First. Statistics regarding imports are given for only nine months of the period the present law was in force prior to the outbreak of the war. The Underwood tariff became effective October 4, 1913. The war in Europe broke out August 1, 1914. Therefore the Underwood Act was in force for a period of 10 months unaffected by the war in Europe.

Second. Where statistics are given in Table 11, according to the various commodities imported, the figures cover imports entered for consumption and not general imports.

Third. Although in Table 7 general imports are given by groups, the various commodities making up the different groups are not itemized.

Fourth. The information furnished by the department does not show the quantity of the various commodities imported.

Because the statistics given by the Department of Commerce are incomplete in the particulars mentioned, the Republican Publicity Association has compiled from official documents of the United States Department of Commerce tables which show the quantity and value of general imports for the full 10 months the Underwood-Simmons tariff law was in force prior to the outbreak of the war in Europe, as compared with the corresponding 10 months in the previous year under Republican law, and also for the corresponding 10 months under Democratic law but with the war in Europe exerting its influence as a protective measure. We have avoided duplicating any data supplied by the Department of Commerce and published in Senate Document No. 366. At the conclusion of the series of tables of imports there is given a summary of imports, exports, and trade balances. An index also accompanies the compilation.

We submit these figures without argument or comment, confident that every student of these figures will reach the same conclusion this association has formed as to the lesson the statistics teach regarding the effect of a tariff-for-revenue-only policy.

Yours, very truly,

JONATHAN BOURNE, Jr.,
President Republican Publicity Association.

IMPORTS, EXPORTS, AND TRADE BALANCES.

General imports of merchandise into the United States, during the first 10 months of the emocratic tariff of 1913 (Oct. 4, 1913 to July 31, 1914), under peace conditions before the European war, compared with the corresponding periods of the Republican tariff under peace conditions, and the Democratic tariff under the influence of protective war conditions.

Compiled by the Republican Publicity Association from official statistics of the United States Department of Commerce. Revised and corrected to Sept. 17, 1915, by the department.]

NOTES.

1. Where no figures appear in the columns it indicates imports, if any, are returned with "All other articles" at end of the compilation.
2. Imports for a fractional part of a 10-months period are not shown as the intent is to furnish a comparison of the three complete periods of 10 months each. In some cases, however, fractional parts are given and accompanied with a foot note, but, in all other cases the fractions of a period are included with "All other articles" at end of compilation.

² All other paper and paper board, including print paper, valued above 2½ and not above 4 cents per pound.

³ Imports for one month only (July, 1915).

¹ Free under Republican and dutiable under Democratic tariff.² The 1913 column represents unground spices, such as cassia buds, cinnamon, cloves, clove stems, mace, nutmegs, and pimento. The Democratic tariff put a duty on them; therefore, they are included with the dutiable in the 1914 and 1915 columns.

¹ In the 1913 column the "free of duty" came in under the Canadian reciprocity law of July 26, 1911, and the "dutiable" under the Republican tariff of Aug. 5, 1909. The Democratic tariff of Oct. 3, 1913, superseded those two laws and placed all wood pulp upon the free list; therefore, the 1914 and 1915 columns represent the total imports under the Democratic tariff. The "ton" represents 2,240 pounds.

² Dutiable under Republican and free under Democratic tariff.

³ Republican tariff rates were in force two months during the 1914 Democratic period from Oct. 4 to Nov. 30, 1913, on all wool and hair (except the Angora goat). The Democratic tariff made those items free of duty beginning Dec. 1, 1913, while the Democratic reduced duty on hair of the Angora goat went into effect Jan. 1, 1914. Angora goat hair is included in class 2 for the above three periods, as figures do not permit a separate comparison being made.

² Dutiable under Republican and free under Democratic tariff.

³ For 8 months only, under the Democratic tariff (Dec. 1, 1913, to July 31, 1914).

⁴ For month of July, 1915. Prior to July 1, 1915, included with "All other manufactures of wool."

⁵ For 7 months under the Democratic tariff (Jan. 1 to July 31, 1914). Prior to Jan. 1, 1914, included with "All other manufactures" of wool.

⁶ Republican tariff rates were in force for 2 months (Oct. and Nov., 1913) on press cloths and wool wastes; and for 3 months (Oct., Nov., and Dec., 1913) on all other manufactures of wool during the 1914 Democratic period.

⁷ During the 1914 Democratic peace period the Republican tariff was in effect on sugar and molasses for 5 months (Oct. 4, 1913, to Mar. 1, 1914); raw wool and wool waste for 2 months (Oct. 4 to Dec. 1, 1913); and manufactures of wool for 3 months (Oct. 4, 1913, to Jan. 1, 1914).

SUMMARY.

total imports, exports, and trade balances of the United States during the first 10 months of the Democratic tariff of 1913 (Oct. 4, 1913, to July 31, 1914) under peace conditions and the period before the European war, compared with the corresponding periods of the Republican tariff under peace conditions and the Democratic tariff under the influence of protective war conditions.

¹ The Democratic tariff placed wool on the free list Dec. 1, 1913, and the reduced rates by the Democratic tariff did not go into effect until Jan. 1, 1914, on manufactures of wool, and Mar. 1, 1914, on sugar and molasses. Therefore, during the 1914 Democratic peace period the Republican tariff was in effect on wool for 2 months (October and November, 1913); manufactures of wool for 3 months (October, November, and December, 1913); and sugar and molasses for 5 months (October, 1913, to February, 1914, inclusive).
